Lions Ask For Old Eyeglasses

RICHMOND, Va. - Virginia Lions Club members would like to have your old eyeglasses -- the ones you can no longer use.

The Lions measure and distribute such eyeglasses to those who need them for work or study, but cannot afford them. Even though new eyeglasses are provided to the poor of many communities by governmental or welfare agencies, distribution of used eyeglasses can save the taxpayer the cost of this service.

Old Dominion Eye Bank and Research, Inc., which is entirely supported by Virginia Lions, acts as the receiving station for used glasses. However, you may turn over your used eyeglasses to any local Lions club member and he will see that they are sent to the Eye Bank. From the Eye Bank, the glasses are sent to a special Lions-sponsored center where they are measured and prepared for distribution, both here and abroad, as requests for specific refractions are received.

The name and address of a local Lions Club member whom you may contact can be secured from your local Chamber of Commerce or by writing to Old Dominion Eye Bank, 408 North 12th Street, Richmond, Va. 23219.

CORRECTION

The Sheriff's department of Appomattox County has two deputies with the same first name - Cecil Reynolds and Cecil Rickmond. In the Times-Virginian last week, the name of Cecil Rickmond was unintentionally omitted from the sheriff's department listing in an article pertaining to the Appomattox County supervisors' meeting and to the addition of deputy Dallas Moore as a full-time employee.

We regret this error and want to assure readers that when they call the sheriff's department they will find a full complement of deputies including two gentlemen by name of "Cecil".
